Hot jobs print revives Fed hike odds

PAYROLLS BEAT PUSHES THE 10-YEAR TO 4.78% AS MARKETS HEAD INTO CPI WEEK — NEXT OPEN TUESDAY, SEPT 8

Index levels are Friday, Sept 4 cash close; sparkline paths are illustrative, not tick-accurate.

BIG PICTURE

- RATES: Fed hike odds for Sept 15–16 jumped back to ~65%, from ~55% pre-report, reversing Wednesday's Waller-driven dip.
- JOBS: August payrolls landed at +162,000 versus a +53,000 consensus; unemployment held at 4.1%.
- YIELDS: The 10-year rose 2bp to 4.78%, erasing Wednesday's Waller-driven relief in bonds.
- OIL / IRAN: Brent topped $97 and WTI held above $92 as Iran struck Kuwait — supply risk keeps an inflation premium alive into CPI week.

WHAT CHANGED OVERNIGHT

- 1

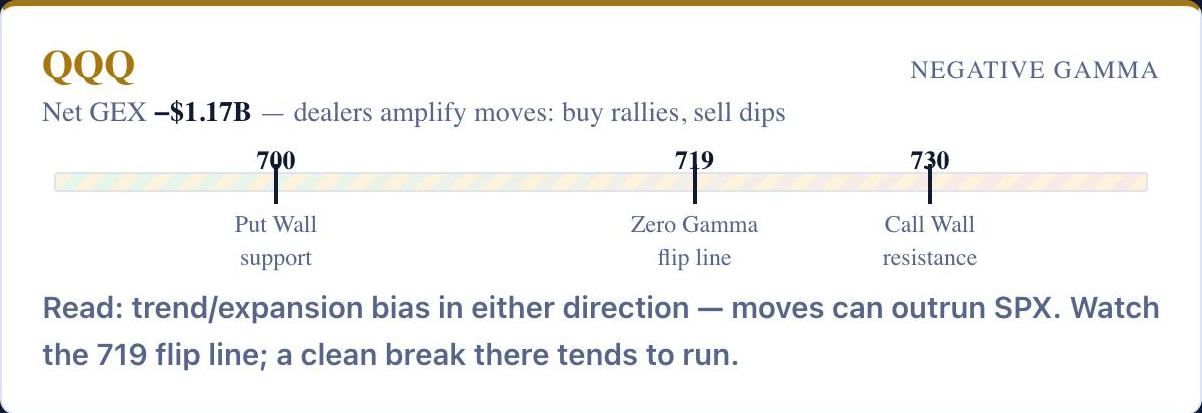

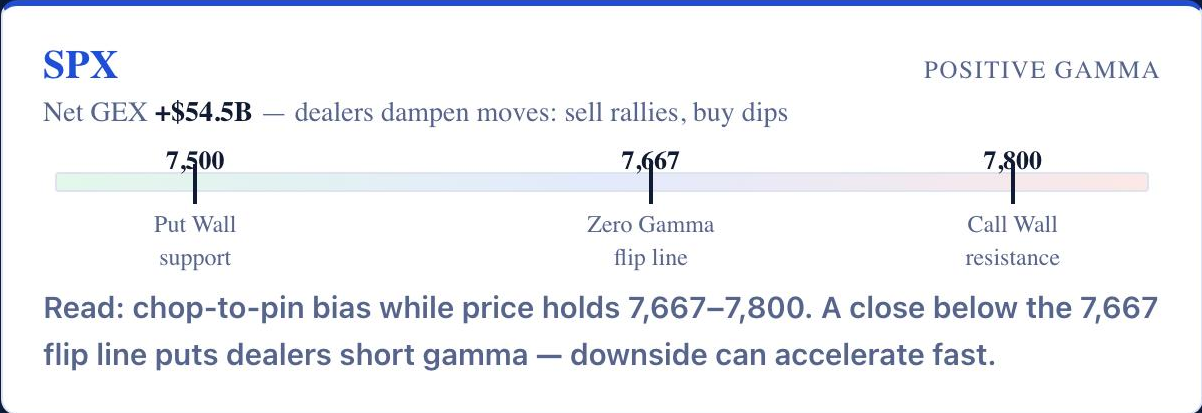

HIKE ODDS REVERSED. September probability jumped back to ~65% (from ~55% Wednesday) after the hot payrolls print.
- 2

YIELDS BACKED UP. 10Y rose to 4.78%, back near the week's highs and off Wednesday's Waller-driven dip.
- 3

MEMORY & AI-INFRA LED. SNDK, MU, WDC and neocloud names (NBIS, IREN) rallied even as the index dipped.
- 4

VIX STILL ASLEEP. Held a 14–17 band for a 25th straight session — compression, not confirmation.

BOTTOM LINE

A hot jobs print undid Wednesday's dovish repricing and put the Fed hike odds back above 60% — but VIX shrugging it off at 14 says the tape isn't scared yet. SPX's positive-gamma pin (7,667–7,800) argues for fading edges into the open; QQQ's negative gamma argues for respecting whichever way 719 breaks. Thursday's CPI is the print that decides which regime wins before the Sept 16 Fed decision.
